NO. 58.

A THRILLING INCIDENT. A thrilling incident of a kind rarely experienced in these times of national peace occurred on board the United States steamship Mississippi during her recent cruise on the coast of Japan. On the 7th of October, 1858, the frigate arrived off the entrance of the har bor of Nagasaki. Before leaving Hakodadi, intelligence had been received of the difficulties between this country and England, growing out of the course of the English cruisers Mississippi that war existed between the two nations, every preparation was made to meet the ships of the enemy, supposing any might Pictorial, Welcome Guest, Literary Companion, to be caught as the Mississippi was, in the war of 1812. At nine o'clock in the afternoon, a sail was discovered standing out of the harbor, in fighting trim, under topsails and jib-running before the wind. The strange sail was at once conjectured to be an English frigate Hymns in large type,) bound in one volume, 50c. all was commotion on board the Mississippi. The crew were called to quarters, the guns were cast loose, loaded with round shot and shell, and trained upon the supposed enemy, the boarders were armed with pistols and brought up to receive the wounded, and the surgeons were in readiness to operate, in everything on board bore a warlike appear-

The strange sail, a much larger ship than the Mississippi, approached rapidly. Every man stood by his guns. The lock-strings were drawn out, and the men awaited in breathless silence the approach of the stranger, determined, if she was a beligerent, to give her one broadside at least. The flag of and Alexander Hamilton, by Hon. Jere Clemens, the approaching vessel being concealed behind her topsails, it could not be made out, but as she neared the port bow of the Mississippi, it was found to be the stars and stripes! Every one drew a long breath. But just then the flag was hauled down, which induced the fear that the stranger had played a ruse de querre upon the Mississippi, in order to take her. Every man again sprang to his gun, obedient to the order, "Train the guns upon her!" But the American flag was again run, and it was soon discovered that the ves-RECOLLECTIONS AND PRIVATE MEM- sel was the U.S., steamship Minnesota, bound for home.
